

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method is provided for encouraging patient compliance with a medicine regimen that includes interaction with the patient. The method includes the steps of providing a database which includes information regarding each patient.

Information is supplied to the database by smart packages and other stakeholders.

- 5 The information in the database is used to construct a patient report that may be viewed by the patient and others. Information in the patient report includes data on the patient's compliance, side effects of the medicine, expected results, interactions with other medicines, statements complimenting compliance, and warnings discouraging non-compliance. The patient report may be accessed by a common
- 10 communication means such as the Internet.